About

‘Army Of Ants’ comes from Sharan B’s curiosity about nature and the small details of everyday life. He works with dried leaves, stones, wood, fish bones, and other overlooked materials. Each sculpture starts from what he sees in them.

A dried leaf becomes a cockroach. Fish thorns become a Venus flytrap. Birds, insects, and snakeskin textures come from careful attention to the discarded and the ordinary.

Sharan uses brass and found stone to build an army of ants. The army asks us to look more closely at what we step over every day.
