About

What happens when a room remembers?

Artists from Banaras Hindu University invite you into the intimate architecture of home. The soft exhaustion of an unmade bed. Curtains drawn against the afternoon. Clothes that seem to wait for someone who has left.

“Between Rooms” asks a question. If we cannot remember everything, does our body become the archive instead? Through wood, canvas, paper, and found objects, these artists construct spaces that feel familiar and ghostly, like walking into your childhood home after years away.
