

cats of kochi

Published 9 March 2025

Mia, the princess of Fort Kochi

Mia, a ginger cat with a little sass, guides readers around Kochi. Her first adventure explores Teapot cafe, a cozy spot filled with stories.

In this page

The sunlight glints off my glorious ginger fur as I make my entrance. Always with grace, sometimes with a little sass. I am Mia, your resident correspondent for all things beautiful, cozy and joy-sparking in Kochi.

Getting to this throne was not all velvet cushions and endless pets. Once upon a time, my humans abandoned me. I was left with a heart full of anxiety and a world that felt a little too loud. I found myself at Cats of Kochi, sharing space and side-eye with five other cats, but my soul longed for a kingdom of my own.

That is when fate and a friend of the human behind CatsofKochi stepped in, and whisked me away to a quieter palace. Suddenly, I was the only cat in a house ruled by a single mom and her two teen daughters. Let's just say, they quickly learned who is in charge (hint: it is me). With their love and patience, my true self emerged: curious, elegant, and never shy about demanding attention. On my terms, of course.

I am the queen here. My humans adore and obey me. I decide when my humans wake, and there is no oversleeping on my watch, ma'am. I set the rules for petting. Too much, and you'll get a gentle swat or maybe a love bite.

Beneath my regal exterior, my heart secretly bursts with affection for my family and for every cozy corner, sunbeam and story Kochi has to offer. I am your guide to the city's most aesthetic nooks and happy-making haunts. I promise to bring you tales of adventure, beauty and the occasional dramatic escape. After all, life is too short not to chase a little sunlight, or a good story, every day.

Stay fabulous!

Read about my first adventure at Fort Kochi. Mia's First Adventure at Peter Celli Street, Fort Kochi - Exploring Teapot cafe, a cozy spot filled with stories

Places in this story 2

Fort KochiPeter Celli Street
Street